THE documents listed below relate to the Coke family and estates which came into its possession mainly during the lifetime of one of its most celebrated members, Chief Justice Sir Edward Coke (d. 1634); the properties concerned lie for the most part in Derbyshire, Lancashire and Suffolk and the period covered ranges from the twelfth century to the nineteenth. The bulk of the collection was deposited in the Library by Lady Crutchley, formerly of Longford Hall, Derbyshire, a descendant of Thomas William, earl of Leicester (d. 1842), the famous "Mr. Coke of Holkham". A number of supplementary deeds was subsequently added by Mr. Gerald E. V. Crutchley and these, which include items of considerable interest by reason of their early date and rare seals, have been appended ¹ to the list of the original deposit.

Derbyshire documents, some five hundred in number, comprise rather more than half the collection. The majority concern Longford and its descent for seven hundred years through the families of Longford (from about 1200) and Coke. Included is the purchase deed ² by which this property was acquired by Sir Edward Coke from the trustees of the last male owner, Nicholas Longford, and also the indenture ³ by which it was settled on his youngest surviving son Clement Coke, on the occasion of his marriage to Sarah, daughter of Alexander Reddish of Reddish, Lancashire, and great-niece of the above-mentioned Nicholas. By the same settlement Clement Coke also received from Sir Edward the manors of Wherstead, Bourn Hall and Pannington and other Suffolk possessions, while through Sarah, a co-heir of her father, estates in south-east Lancashire, notably in Reddish, Great and Little Heaton and Crumpsall, came into the Coke family. All these properties are represented below—Longford (twelfth-nineteenth century), Wherstead (thirteenth-eighteenth century), Reddish (thirteenth-nineteenth century) and Heaton (thirteenth-seventeenth century) most fully—together with much material concerning their former owners; for example, the families of Longford of Longford, Reddish of Reddish, Hulton, Langley, Prestwich, Browne (Marston Montgomery),1 Radcliffe and Hall (Wherstead). Included are two finely emblazoned genealogical rolls of the Longford and Reddish families, drawn up in the seventeenth century.2 Documents relating directly to Chief Justice Coke are unfortunately not numerous, although two occur which are in his own hand.3 But, as indicated above, the major properties concerned were acquired as a result of his initiative and the whole collection forms an indispensable source of information regarding his descendants. Several of the earlier Derbyshire deeds, which include, apart from Longford itself, smaller groups concerning Boythorpe, Hollington, Mammerton, Newton Solney and many other places in the county, were consulted by Jeayes;4 but his descriptions, it should be added, are often imperfect. These items have accordingly been listed again below and, where possible, with more fullness. In addition, some sixty documents will be found which were omitted from his Catalogue,5 although falling within its scope (i.e. dating from before 1550); of these, roughly one-third are of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. Much material of value to the local historian is contained in the early Derbyshire, Lancashire and Suffolk documents. Among items of interest relating to these counties may be mentioned two charters of the family of Ferrières, earls of Derby,¹ a final concord of 1197,² a grant of free warren to Nigel de Longford (1252),³ a number of deeds relating to the Priory of St. Peter and St. Paul at Ipswich (thirteenth and fourteenth centuries),⁴ a dispensation from Archbishop Cranmer to Henry Tofte of Darley Abbey to become a secular priest and be capable of a benefice (1538),⁵ an address of loyalty to the King from the Grand Jury at Derby Assizes (1649),⁶ various presentments to Longford, many wills and allied documents of the Coke family, and articles of agreement respecting the enclosure of Swinton Moor (1684).⁷

A wide range of documents is represented, although muniments of title predominate. Court records and allied materials are numerous. In particular may be cited the lengthy series of court rolls for the manors of Bourn Hall in Wherstead (thirteenth-eighteenth century) and Longford (fourteenth-seventeenth century). Other rolls are those for Haddon (fourteenth-fifteenth century), Newton Solney (fourteenth-sixteenth century), and Hathersage (sixteenth century), all in Derbyshire, and for Wherstead and Goddelsford (seventeenth-eighteenth century) in Suffolk. The earliest roll listed below is one of 1276 (Bourn Hall). In addition to court rolls, court books for Bourn Hall and Wherstead (1627-1640) and for various courts (1560-1571) of the Reddish family, held at Prestwich and Reddish, also occur. There are, too, fifteenth-century account rolls of the bailiffs and collectors of rents for Longford and North Wingfield, Derbyshire. Among rentals may be mentioned those for Barlborough, Hathersage, Longford and Newton Solney, all of 1476, with two later ones (eighteenth century) for Longford; two for Bourn Hall (sixteenth century) and two, in early copies, for the Priory of St. Peter and St. Paul at Ipswich (sixteenth century); and a rental of Reddish, Crumpsall, Prestwich, Pendlebury and Tetlow (1590-1622), in Lancashire. Surveys of Derbyshire and Suffolk properties of the Coke family may also be found.

The collection should prove of interest to the sigillographer. Examples of the Great Seal occur from the reign of Henry III onwards and there are perfect specimens of the Duchy of Lancaster seal (1577) and of the rare Statute Merchant Recognizance Seal of Wigan (1391). Unfortunately imperfect, although surviving in large fragments, are the seal (1337), with secretum, of Philip de Thame, Prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England, and the common seal of Ipswich (1610). Private seals of equestrian, heraldic or patterned design, are, as might be expected, most frequent and among these particular reference may be made to the fine equestrian seals, with counter-seals, attached to Nos. 923 and 942. Various Lancashire and Derbyshire families are represented by heraldic specimens, notably the Longfords; in this category attention is drawn to the seals of Sir William de Cantelowe and Maud his wife (1371), William Fitzherbert of Norbury (1390), Thomas la Warre (1405), Sir William Thirning (1405), and Sir Nicholas de Longford (1475). Among seals with other designs three are outstanding: those of John de Saucheverel (1197), Robert de Ferrières, "son and heir of William de Ferrières, formerly earl of Derby" (1262), and Michael, son of Nigel de Bupton (late twelfth/early thirteenth century), the last having a striking representation, on green wax, of Samson slaying the lion. An unusual seal, unfortunately imperfect, is that of Richard Swyfte, the King's carpenter (1393).
