<sup>2</sup> The grant from Swallowfield was made as above. The grant could only come from two-thirds of the manor because the remaining third was held by Elizabeth's mother, the Duchess of Bedford; this third reverted to the queen in 1479 (C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 169). It will be seen later in the account that John Bourghchier, Lord Berners, was the queen's chamberlain (p. 18). He had been a staunch supporter of the Yorkists since at least 1459.

<sup>3</sup> The queen had been granted £13 from this source in July 1465 (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 445), whereas she was due to receive in 1466-7 only £10 from this source, and in fact got nothing. Perhaps she suffered from the competing claim of Thomas Dalamare, to whom the king owed £84 in April 1465 for horses, saddles, and shields for tournaments; Dalamare was to be paid £11 10s. 0d. a year from Benham Lovell and various sums from other sources until his claim was met (ibid. p. 435). The farmers and receivers of Benham had been told to pay the queen £13 in July 1465 (C.C.R. 1461-1468, p. 282).

<sup>3</sup> These sums of £12 from the farm of Forde and £20 17s. 6d. from the farm of Shrewsbury were granted in January 1466. The fee-farm of Forde had been estimated at the same sum in 1450 when it had been allocated to the expenses of the household of Henry VI (Rot. Parl. v. 174).

Set reddit de denariis receptis de Ricardo Knyghtley in persolucionem £15 per annum, de firma manerii de Falwesley<sup>2</sup> in comitatu Norhamptune, prefate

<sup>1</sup> The sums of £10 6s. 8d. from the manor of Rowley and of £9 from the manors of Kinver and Storton and the forest of Kinver, all in Staffordshire, had been granted to Elizabeth in these terms in January 1466. Orders to pay the authorized sums from Cambridge, Malmesbury, Forde, Shrewsbury, Rowley, Kinver, and Storton, had all been made in January 1466 (C.C.R. 1461-1468, pp. 293-4).

<sup>2</sup> The queen was granted £15 from the farm of the manor of Fawsley in March 1465, when this sum was said to come "from Simon son of Robert de Daventre and his heirs", and this was reiterated in January 1466 (C.P.R. 1461-1467, pp. 430, 480). It is not clear how this fits with the statement in the account that the sum was paid by Richard Knyghtley. Henry V had granted £10 a year to Richard Knyghtley, a king's sergeant (C.P.R. 1416-1422, p. 440), and he had died by February 1443, leaving a widow named Elizabeth and a son Richard, then aged

Et de denariis receptis de Olivero Dynham,<sup>1</sup> clero de auro regine vocato ten (C.P.R. 1441-1446, p. 151). It seems likely that this is the Richard who is said to have paid £15 to the queen this year.

As for "Simon, son of Robert of Daventre and his heirs", this statement of responsibility for the payment of £15 to the queen from Fawsley need not be incompatible with the statement that Richard Knyghtley actually paid this sum. When many of these farms now assigned to Queen Elizabeth had been allocated to the revenues of Henry VI's household in 1450, the same names of Damory, Segrave, Wroxhale, Audeley, Beller, and Le Zouche of Totnes were given as responsible for payment (Rot. Parl. v. 174b); and when the farms were regranted to Elizabeth of York by Henry VII in 1492 (C.P.R. 1485-1494, pp. 76, 369), most of the names were repeated in the same form of words. It seems, therefore, as though the wording of the grant is to determine legal responsibility, not personal identity. Richard Knyghtley may have been an assignee, a payee, or a sub-tenant of the heirs of Simon, son of Robert of Daventre, and the latter may have been the persons legally responsible for payment. In 1457 a grant of 6d. a day had been made to John Rawlyn, yeoman of the Crown, from the £15 which Simon, son of Robert Daventre, and his heirs were bound to render from Fawsley each year to the Crown (C.P.R. 1452-1461, p. 391).

Later in the reign the queen had a special officer, Thomas Stidolf, as receiver of her fee-farms and queen's gold. Appointed on 7 February, 11 Edward IV, Stidolf has left at least two accounts that have survived (D.L.28/27/11, 28/27/11A for 13-14 and 21-22 Edward IV). All the income from fee-farms mentioned in the household account for 6-7 Edward IV, except the revenues from Swallowfield and Benham Lovell, appears in Stidolf's account for 13-14 Edward IV.

<sup>1</sup> Oliver Dynham had in March 1461 been presented by the king to the parish church of Cheshunt (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 9). In 1479 he was made Archdeacon of Norfolk (J. LeNeve, Fasti Ecclesiae Anglicanae, revised B. Jones (1963), iv. 29) and in 1480 a canon of Windsor (C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 222). He died in April 1500 as Archdeacon of Surrey (LeNeve, op. cit. rev. Jones, iv. 49). He appears to have been a kinsman of Sir John Dynham, later Lord Dynham, who gave vital help to Edward IV in his flight to Calais from Ludlow in 1459, and was afterwards richly rewarded—amongst other things, by being made an esquire of the King's Household in 1462 and by the grant of many lands and offices. Lord Dynham was sufficiently adroit to hold many offices under Richard III and yet to be appointed Treasurer of the Exchequer and made a Knight of the Garter under Henry VII (C. L. Scofield, op. cit. i. 41-42; C.C.R. 1461-1468, pp. 111, 286; The Complete Peerage iv. 378-80.) Oliver Dynham may have been promoted in part because of his connection with the powerful and shrewd John Dynham (C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 190).

<sup>1</sup> William Bourgchier was a younger brother of Henry, Earl of Essex. He had married a co-heiress of the Fitzwarrin lands, which were situated mainly in the south-west of England. He died before 12 December 1469; his son and heir, Fulk Bourgchier, had special livery of his father's lands on that date (The Complete Peerage, v. 508-9).

<sup>4</sup> These two Exchequer officials survived the revolution of 1461. Hugh Fenne was clerk and auditor of the Exchequer under Henry VI, and Under-Treasurer of England 1463-7 (Wedgwood, op. cit. p. 316). William Essex was King's Remembrancer of the Exchequer from 1450 to 1480 without a break (ibid. pp. 302-3).

que, per mortem predicti Thome ac racione minoris etatis Johannis Skrene, filii et heredis Johannis Skrene defuncti, qui de dicto domino rege tenuit in capite die quo obiit infra etatem et in custodia dicti domini regis existentem, ad manum dicti domini regis devenerunt 53s. 4d.

Et de denariis receptis, de consimili auro regine, de quodam fine 13 marcarum facto cum domino rege, per Johannem Myrven,<sup>4</sup> pro licencia concordandi cum Thoma Burgh, milite, et Margareta, uxore eius, nuper uxore Willelmi Botreaux, militis, de placito convencionis de maneriis de Flexlonde, Bennyton et Bedynham

<sup>3</sup> Sir Peter Ardern had been granted custody of the lands of Thomas Skrene as recently as 20 May 1466, when it was explained that John Skrene the heir was the great-nephew of Thomas Skrene (C.F.R. 1461-1471, p. 186). Ardern, who had been Chief Baron of the Exchequer and later Justice of the Common Pleas, died in 1468 (E. Foss, The Judges of England (1851), iv. 409).

<sup>4</sup> John Myrven was a Londoner who was of genteel status, perhaps helped by profitable business deals such as this. Already described as " gentleman " in 1455, when he was one of the keepers of the hundreds of Cookham and Bray (C.F.R. 1452-1461, p. 141), he was acquiring the custody of lands in Derbyshire in 1461 (C.F.R. 1461-1471, pp. 35, 50). Thomas Burgh showed great skill in keeping on the winning side continuously from the reign of Henry VI to that of Henry VII (Wedgwood, op. cit. p. 136). He had become a knight by 1464 (Rot. Parl. v. 527).

<sup>1</sup> Sir Robert Hungerford, Lord Hungerford, was attainted after fighting for Henry VI at Towton (Rot. Parl. v. 477) and beheaded after the battle of Hexham (The Historical Collections of a Citizen of London, ed. J. Gairdner (Cam. Soc. 1876), pp. 224-5). In December 1464 Thomas Hungerford, his son and heir, and Thomas's wife Anne secured the appointment of various commissions to save various lands in Wiltshire, Devon, and Somerset from forfeiture, because they were in the hands of feoffees to uses, of whom John Mervyn was one in all three shires (C.P.R. 1461-1467, pp. 364-5). North Cadbury, etc., are in Somerset and Dorset.

<sup>2</sup> John Paulet was sheriff of Hampshire in 1457-8 and again in 1461-2 (C.F.R. 1452-1461, pp. 195, 220; C.F.R. 1461-1471, p. 48). The creation of knights was in honour of the queen's coronation, which took place on Whit Sunday 1465 (Scofield, op. cit. pp. 375-6).

<sup>1</sup> The total value of the sources from which this sum was derived was, according to the valor for this year, £6,110 13s. 4d. From this £812 0s. 2¾d. had been deducted for annual charges, and a further £539 11s. 2½d. had gone in wages and pensions, repairs to castles, journeys of accountants, and so forth. Of the remaining £4,759 1s. 10¾d. the sum of £442 16s. 8½d. had been kept in smaller parcels as working balances in the hands of the numerous accountants from whom this income came.

<sup>2</sup> Lord Berners was the younger brother of Henry, Earl of Essex and Thomas, Archbishop of Canterbury, who had both assisted the Yorkist cause. Henry had married the Duke of York's sister Isabella; Lord Berners fought for the Yorkists at the second battle of St. Albans, was taken prisoner, and released only when Edward, victorious at Towton, entered York where Berners was imprisoned. In June 1461 he was made constable of Windsor Castle (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 17) and thereafter rewards, offices, and commissions came thick and fast. He survived the readeposition of Henry VI and died in 1474.

<sup>3</sup> Humphrey Bourgchier was the son and heir of Lord Berners. He and his father brought a force of Kentishmen to Edward IV in London a few days before the Battle of Barnet, in which Humphrey was killed (J. Warkworth, Chronicle, ed. J. O. Halliwell (Cam. Soc., 1839), pp. 15, 17). James Haute was a kinsman of William Haute who had married Jane Woodville, the queen's aunt (Excerpta Historica, ed. S. Bentley (1831), p. 250). In a grant of 1468 John was described as "the king's servant Jaques Haulte, Esq., one of the servers of the queen" (C.P.R. 1467-1477, p. 86) and by 1480 he had become a squire of the body (C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 169). In 1468 he was made Constable of Hertford Castle (Somerville, op. cit. i. 604), and in 1484 he was granted lands in Kent for his good service against the rebels (C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 458). He managed to avoid attainder by Henry VII, however, perhaps because of his connection with Richard Haute who was executed by Richard III at Pontefract Castle in 1483.

He was a kinsman of Anne Haute, who was engaged to Sir John Paston in 1469 (The Paston Letters, ed. J. Gairdner (1910), pp. 357).

Et Anne Hastynges,<sup>3</sup> une damicellarum dicte regine, pro feodo suo, 20

Elizabeth, Lady Scales, was the heiress of Thomas, Lord Scales, who had attempted to hold the Tower of London against the Yorkists after the Battle of Northampton and had been killed by the Thames watermen in July 1460. She had married as her second husband Anthony Woodville, the queen's brother, soon afterwards. She died in 1473 (The Complete Peerage, ed. G. H. White (1949), ii. 507).

<sup>2</sup> Lady Alice Fogge was a daughter and coheiress of Sir Thomas Kyriell, who had been beheaded after the second Battle of St. Albans in February 1461. Her husband was Sir John Fogge, Treasurer of the King's Household, whose first wife had been another Alice, daughter of Sir William Haute and first cousin to the queen (Wedgwood, op. cit. 340).

Joanna Norreis may have been the wife of Sir William Norys, one of the knights of the chamber to Edward IV at this time (E101/412/2). A member of parliament for Berkshire in 1459, he was a justice of the peace and sheriff of that county under Edward IV and on various commissions in Berkshire and Oxfordshire. Attainted by Richard III for his share in the Duke of Buckingham's rising, he was restored to his numerous estates and offices by Henry VII, who made him a knight of the body in the royal household. He lived until 1506 (Wedgwood, op. cit. p. 640).

Elizabeth Uvedale may have been the second wife of Sir Thomas Uvedale, who was several times sheriff and a member of parliament for Hampshire and Sussex. He was knighted at the queen's coronation (Annales Rerum Anglicarum, in Letters and Papers Illustrative of the Wars of the English in France, ed. J. Stevenson, vol. 2, pt. 2, pp. 783-7). He died in 1474; Elizabeth is said to have died in 1488 (Wedgwood, op. cit. p. 900).

<sup>3</sup> This may be the Anne Hastynges who was the wife of Ralph Hastynges, one of the squires of the body (E101/412/2; C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 369). Knighted at Tewkesbury in 1471, Sir Ralph Hastings is said by Wedgwood (op. cit. p. 433) to have taken to wife, in 1463, Amy, of the family of Vaux of Harrowden in Northamptonshire.

marce per annum, percipiende predictis terminis equaliter, videlicet pro termino . . . infra tempus huius compoti accidentibus, per dictas litteras suas de warranto simul cum acquietancia ut supra remanentes £6 13s. 4d.

Et Elizabeth Donne, Alianore Prudde, Alicie Hulcote,<sup>1</sup> Margarete Stanley, Katerina Faverham et Marie Genyngham, damicellis prefate regine, pro feodo suo, videlicet cuilibet earum £10 per annum, percipiende terminis predicti equaliter, videlicet pro eisdem terminis infra dictum tempus huius compoti accidentibus, per supradictas litteras de warranto simul cum acquietanciis remanentes, ut supra £60

Et Johanne Martyn,<sup>2</sup> une camerariarum prefate regine, pro feodo suo 100s. per annum, percipiendi terminis predictis equaliter, videlicet pro eisdem terminis infra dictum tempus huius compoti accidentibus, per predictas litteras de warranto et acquietancia ut supra remanentes 100s.

Et Beatrice Notsount, altere camerariarum dicte domine regine, pro feodo suo 56s. 8d. per annum, percipiendi terminis predictis equaliter, videlicet pro eisdem terminis infra dictum tempus accidentibus, per predictas litteras de warranto et acquietancia ut supra remanentes 56s. 8d. /

p. 19

Et Johanni Aleyn,<sup>3</sup> clero signeti regine, pro feodo suo, £4 per annum, percipiendi terminis Pasche et Sancti Michaelis equaliter, per litteras eiusdem

<sup>1</sup> Elizabeth Donne was the wife of John Donne, one of the squires of the body to Edward IV, who for his good services to the king's father was granted in March 1465 the castle, town, manor, and lordship of Telagharn in South Wales and numerous estates in Northamptonshire (C.P.R. 1461-1467, pp. 430-1).

Eleanor Prudde may have been the wife of Thomas Prudde or Prout who was a squire of the body or of the household of Edward IV at this time (E101/412/2).

Alice Hulcote was the wife of John Hulcote (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 479), who was one of the squires of the body at this time (E101/412/2) and remained so until he died in 1482 (C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 227; Wedgwood, op. cit. p. 481).

<sup>2</sup> Joan Martyn's predecessor in the household of Margaret of Anjou, Joan Prynce, was also paid 100s. a year. These ladies evidently counted as "principal lady of the bedchamber"; for the predecessor of Beatrice Notsount, Joan Bateresby was, like Beatrice, paid only 56s. 8d. a year (ante, xl. 406).

<sup>3</sup> The name of Aleyn or Allen was, of course, not at all infrequent, and when it was coupled with a very common Christian name like John, there were naturally a number of John Allens alive at the same time. In the 1460s, for example, there was a John Aleyn who was a doctor of laws, another who was a mercer of London, a third who was a goldsmith of London, and another who had left a little land in Lincolnshire (C.P.R. 1461-1467, pp. 89, 194, 242, 471). John Aleyn, "gentilman" of London, may have been the mercer or the goldsmith; but the husbandman of East Greenwich and the tailor of London must have been two more John Aleyns (C.C.R. 1461-1468, pp. 143, 464, 385-6). The John Aleyn who was a collector of customs and subsidies in Yarmouth in 1466 may have

Summa feodi militum, dominarum, damicellarum, et aliorum infra curiam et hospicium regine—£308 6s. 8d. [Corrected from “ £312 6s. 8d. ” by the auditors].

Et in feodo Rogeri Radcliff, clerici,<sup>1</sup> quem supradicta Domina Elizabeth, Regina Anglie, ordinavit, fecit, et constituit cancellarium suum, habendum et occupandum officium illud quam diu eidem regine placuerit cum omnimodi vadiis, feodis, proficuis et commoditatibus dicto officio ab antiquo debitibus et consuetis, percipiendis annuatim, per manus generalis receptoris sui qui pro tempore fuerit, ad festa Pasche et Sancti Michaelis per equeales porciones, per litteras ipsius regine de warranto, datas 26<sup>to</sup> die Marcii anno 6<sup>to</sup> regis nunc Edwardi 4<sup>ti</sup>, super hunc compotum ostensas et penes ipsum remanentes, videlicet in persolucionem huiusmodi feodi sui pro terminis predictis infra dictum tempus huius compoti accidentibus, prout allocatus est consimilibus temporibus aliarum reginarum Anglie in diversis compotis precedentibus ac per acquietanciam suam inter warranta huius compoti remanentem.

£40 [amended to “ £20 ” with the note “ et non plus quod residuum disallocatur mandato predicto ”].

Et soluta prefato Rogero Radcliff, clero, cancellario prefate regine, £10, pro hospicio suo in Londonia, prout Laurentius Bothe, clericus, nuper cancellarius Margarete, nuper de facto set non de jure regine Anglie, de eadem habuit et percepit et prout huiusmodi allocacio facta fuit eidem Laurencio in compoto been the same man who was the collector of customs and subsidies for King's Lynn in 1470 ; but neither can have been identical with the John Aleyn who was a collector of taxes in Northamptonshire in 1463 (C.F.R. 1461-1471, pp. 178, 262, 103). In view of all this it seems very rash of Colonel Wedgwood to identify this clerk of the signet (holding a comparatively minor post in 1466-7) with the John Aleyn who in 1461 was already a doctor of laws and a lieutenant of the Earl of Warwick to judge an Admiralty case (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 89 ; Wedgwood, op. cit. p. 6). It would, moreover, have been decidedly irregular of a clerk of the signet to leave a lawful son, as Wedgwood makes him do. This John Aleyn may be the king's clerk who was presented to a moiety of the parish church of Gedlyng in 1476 and resigned from a chantry in Wycombe cemetery in 1477 (C.P.R. 1467-1477, p. 591 ; C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 39). If he was young in 1466-7 he may be the king's chaplain who became one of the Masters in Chancery in Ireland in the next reign and one of the king's council there (C.P.R. 1485-1494, p. 473).

Et eidem cancellario regine, pro vadiis suis equitante de Londonia usque Wyndesore, in septimana Pasche infra tempus compoti, mandato ipsius regine, pro diversis materiis, commodum et utilitatem suam tangencibus, communicandis, eundo, morando et redeundo per tres dies, capienti per diem 6s. 8d., per supradictas litteras patentes, superius in secunda particula precedente annotatas, et prout allocatus fuit prefato Laurencio Bothe, clero, in compoto de anno 31<sup>mo</sup> predicto et aliis consimilibus cancellariis in diversis compotis precedentibus—20s.

Et eidem cancellario, pro huiusmodi vadiis suis equitante de Londonia usque Wyndesore, predicto mense Decembris infra tempus compoti, causa supradicta mandato ipsius regine, scilicet eundo, morando, et redeundo per tres dies, capienti per diem ut supra, per dictas litteras patentes superius in quarta particula precedenti plenius specificatas——20s.

Adhuc feoda et vadia officiariorum extra hospicium

Et eidem cancellario, pro consimilibus vadiis suis equitante cum aliis de consilio regine usque Buntyngforde, ibidem, cum cancellario et aliis de consilio regis ducati sui Lancastrie, pro diversis controversiis inter tenentes domine regine de Gormonchester et abbatem de Ramsey<sup>2</sup> communicandis et reformandis, scilicet eundo, morando, et redeundo per tres dies, capienti per diem ut supra per litteras patentas antedictas, superius in quinta particula precedenti annotatas—20s.

<sup>1</sup> Ante, xl. 412. It is of interest that the one household account of Queen Margaret that has survived is the one that is cited several times in the present account as a precedent. Laurence Booth, Margaret's chancellor and later Bishop of Durham, then Archbishop of York 1476-80, was paid his £40 fee and £20 London household expenses, in addition to 60s. allowance for journeys from London to Windsor; whereas the unlucky Radcliff got nothing for his fees.

<sup>2</sup> It is not clear what were the causes of dispute between the Abbot of Ramsey and the queen's tenants at Godmanchester; but, as will have been seen from the reference in this account at the end of the receipts section (MS. p. 16 above), the dispute seems to have led to a reduction of the income from the farms of Huntingdon and Godmanchester. When the queen received these grants by letters patent under the Duchy of Lancaster seal of 7 July 1467, Huntingdon was supposed to provide her with £63 a year and Godmanchester with the high figure of £120 (Rot. Parl. v. 628).

Et in feodo Johannis Forster, armigero, quem eadem regina constituit et ordinavit generalem receptorem suum omnium castrorum, honorum, domaniorum, maneriorum, terrarum, tenementorum, reddituum, feodi firmarum, annuitatum, ac aliarum commoditatum suorum quorumcumque sibi pertinencium iam in manibus suis existentium et que in manus suas imposterum devenient, habendum et occupandum quamdiu eidem regine placuerit, percipiendum annuatim, per manus suas proprias de recepta sua, ad festa Pasche et Sancti Michaelis per equales porciones, feoda, vadia et proficua ab antiquo consueta, per litteras dicte regine patentes, datas 24<sup>to</sup> die Octobris anno dicti regis Edwardi 4<sup>ti</sup> 4<sup>to</sup>, penes ipsum remanentes, videlicet in persolucione huiusmodi feodi sui pro terminis predictis infra tempus huius compoti accidentibus et prout allocatus est consimilibus receptoribus generalibus temporibus diversarum nuper reginarum Anglie in diversis compotis precedentibus £50

Et in allocacione facta prefato receptori generali domine regine, de regardo sibi facto per eandem ultra predictas £50 per annum, pro hospicio suo et mora sua Londonie in exercicie officii sui supradicti, per supradictas litteras patentes, superius in proxima particula precedentи specificatas, et prout allocatus fuit dicto Willelmo Cotton,<sup>1</sup> armigero, generali receptorи Domine Margarete, nuper de facto set non de jure Regine Anglie, in compoto suo de anno 31<sup>mo</sup> predicti nuper regis ac aliis consimilibus receptoribus generalibus temporibus diversarum reginarum in diversis compotis adtunc precedentibus £10

Et eidem Johanni, pro vadis suis equitante de domo sua propria in comitatu Huntendone usque Londoniam pro denariis recipiendis et diversis materiis ipsius regine, cum aliis de magno consilio suo, communicandis et post quemlibet terminum terminorum Sancti Michaelis, Hillarii, Pasche, et Sancti Trinitatis, infra tempus compoti, de Londonia usque domum suam propriam, scilicet eundo, morando,<sup>2</sup> quolibet termino, per 4 dies, capienti per diem ut supra £4

<sup>1</sup> For the biography of William Cotton see Somerville, op. cit. p. 399; for the precedent of William Cotton's fee as receiver-general of Queen Margaret in 1452-3, see ante, xl. 413. Cotton had also had £10 for his household in London and £4 for travelling up to London from his own home (in his case in Suffolk).

Et predicto Johanni, pro consimilibus vadiis suis equitante de Londonia usque Wyndesore, mense Aprilis, infra tempus compoti, mandato ipsius regine, pro diversis materiis, commodum et utilitatem suam tangentibus, cum aliis de consilio suo, ibidem existentibus, communicandis, eundo, morando, et redeundo per 3 dies, capienti per diem ut supra —————— 15s.

seems to have had no difficulty in getting his fee of £10 allowed to him, in spite of her financial troubles (ante, xl. 414).

John Dyve was a lawyer who, like many others, served both sides in turn during the Wars of the Roses. Appointed a justice of the peace for Northamptonshire in 1454, he remained on the commission for this county with rare intervals until 1473. He was often appointed to other commissions for the shire (e.g. gaol delivery) from 1457 onwards ; he served as member of parliament for Northamptonshire in 1455-6 and for Dorchester in 1467-8. He was mayor of Northampton in 1469 (C.P.R. 1467-1477, p. 194 ; for his biography see Wedgwood, op. cit. pp. 275-6).

Et eidem Johanni pro vadiis diurnis suis equitando usque Wyndesore pro materiis ipsius regine et ibidem morando et redeundo, diebus mercurii et jovis proxime post festum Omnitum Sanctorum anno predicto, per 2 dies, capienti per diem ut supra 6s. 8d.

Et eidem generali attornato, pro vadiis diurnis suis morante Londonie ultra finem termini Sancti Michelis infra tempus compoti, a 20<sup>mo</sup> die Novembris usque secundum diem Decembris, pro diversis materiis ipsius regine, scilicet per 11 dies, capienti per diem ut supra.

<sup>1</sup> In March 1467 Robert Iseham was appointed controller of the great custom and the subsidy of wools, hides, and wool-fells in the port of London and places adjacent, provided that he executed the office in person (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 515). He was a justice of the peace for Northamptonshire in 1465 and 1466 (ibid. p. 568) and from 1467 to 1473, except during the brief Lancastrian restoration of 1470-1 (C.P.R. 1467-1477, p. 623). In 1475 he is described as the queen's attorney (ibid. p. 562). He had evidently been a trusted servant of the queen's father-in-law, Edward Grey. In 1456 in the Court of Common Pleas the manors of Newbottle and Brington in Northamptonshire and Woodham Ferrers in Essex were enfeoffed by Edward Grey and his wife Elizabeth to certain persons, among them Robert Iseham, in connection with the marriage of their son John Grey to Elizabeth Woodville; and after John's death at the second Battle of St. Albans in 1461, Robert Iseham seems to have done his best for the young widow in helping her to obtain her marriage portion (G. Smith, The Coronation of Elizabeth Wydeville (1935), pp. 29-30. Not unnaturally, she afterwards appointed him to posts of responsibility in her service. It will be seen from a later reference in this account (MS. p. 24) that he was already her solicitor.

<sup>2</sup> Queen Margaret's attorneys in the Courts of Common Pleas and King's Bench also received a fee of 40s. each. Thomas Luyt was in 1481-2 (and perhaps earlier) the Duchy of Lancaster attorney in the Court of King's Bench (Somerville, op. cit. p. 457). A Thomas Lute was already described in 1461 as "of London, gentleman" (C.F.R. 1461-1471, p. 24) and was not only appointed to government commissions by Edward IV but by Richard III (C.P.R. 1476-1485, pp. 22, 24, 394, 490). This Thomas Lute cannot, however, be definitely identified with the queen's attorney; neither can the Thomas Luyt who was member of parliament for Heytesbury in 1455-6 (Wedgwood, op. cit. p. 564).

<sup>3</sup> Thomas Yonge or Young was the famous member of parliament for Bristol who in 1451 presented the petition in parliament that the Duke of York should be declared the heir to the throne, and was committed to the Tower of London for his boldness. Naturally he found favour with the Yorkist government from 1461 onwards. In 1461 he was made a king's serjeant, recorder of Bristol in 1463, a justice of the Common Pleas in 1467, and a justice of the King's Bench in 1475 (Foss, op. cit. iv. 464; Wedgwood, op. cit. pp. 981-2). In 1465-6 he was a serjeant-at-law retained by the Duchy of Lancaster (Somerville, op. cit. p. 452).

John Catesby was a kinsman, probably an uncle, of William Catesby. He was made a serjeant in 1463, a king's serjeant in 1469, and a justice of the common pleas in 1481; he died in 1486 or 1487 (Foss, op. cit. v. 43).

<sup>1</sup> Henry Suthill or Sotehill, of Southill in Yorkshire, was appointed deputy chief steward of the North Parts of the Duchy of Lancaster in 1459, and was made king's attorney-general in 1461 (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 6). For his career see Somerville, op. cit. pp. 425-6. Until 1473 he served as justice of the peace for the West Riding of Yorkshire, even during the readeption of Henry VI in 1470-1 (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 577; C.P.R. 1467-1477, p. 638) and on commissions too numerous to detail (ibid. passim). According to Foss, Sotehill was an apprentice-at-law in Edward IV's reign (op. cit. iv. 403).

Thomas Urswick was the Recorder of London from 1454 to 1471 who managed to hold the city for the Yorkists against Margaret's forces after the second Battle of St. Albans in 1461 and for Edward IV against the Bastard of Fauconburg in 1471. For the latter service Edward IV knighted him and made him Chief Baron of the Exchequer (Wedgwood, op. cit. pp. 897-8, and Foss, iv. 459-60).

<sup>2</sup> On 12 April 1461 the king's servitor, John Woode, esquire, was granted for life the office of keeper of the king's council chamber at Westminster (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 18); on 26 September 1484 William Lee was granted the offices of keeper of the king's council chamber at Westminster and usher of the Receipt of the Exchequer, instead of John Wood, esquire, who had surrendered letters patent of Edward IV (C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 486). There were a number of prominent John Woods at this time, and it would be rash without further evidence to identify this one with the John Wood who was made master of the mint in 1476 or the John Wood who became treasurer of England in 1483 (C.P.R. 1467-1477, p. 586; C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 361); cf. Snayth, who was receiver of Pontefract in the Duchy of Lancaster from 1471, died in 1473 (Somerville, op. cit. i. 517).

Wedgwood (op. cit. p. 320) says that he was already a yeoman of the Crown in the reign of Henry VI. In November 1461 he surrendered the office of coroner of the marshalsea of the household which he had been granted for life in the previous April (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 57). He received several other grants later (ibid. pp. 137, 189, 201, 224, 303, 487, 531). He died by May, 1476 (C.P.R. 1467-1477, p. 583). <sup>2</sup> Edward Story was Bishop of Carlisle 1468-78 and of Chichester 1478-1503 (F. M. Powicke, Handbook of British Chronology, pp. 213, 217). He may have won the queen's attention because in 1464, when he was parson of the Church of All Hallows the More, he preached at Paul's Cross against the White friar Harry Parker, who had just revived the old controversy about Apostolic poverty and had asserted that Christ was a beggar who lived on alms (ed. knight of that name who was alive at this time ; and though his wife Margaret had been one of the ladies of Queen Margaret’s household (Seaton, op. cit. p. 72 ; ante, xl. 404) and Sir Richard Roos had been a noted poet of the Lancastrian court, he must have met frequently Elizabeth Woodville when she, too, was a lady-in-waiting to Queen Margaret. Roos was later to write several poems for Anthony Woodville, the queen’s brother, and his niece, Eleanor Roos, married Richard Haute, daughter of Elizabeth Woodville’s aunt (Seaton, op. cit. pp. 428, 53).

<sup>1</sup> In October 1466 he was not only king’s knight but sheriff of Essex and Hertford (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 526). He was appointed to various commissions in the 1460s and 1470s (ibid. pp. 277, 553 ; C.P.R. 1467-1477, pp. 220, 351, 407, 606), and was put on commissions of array in the reigns of Edward V and Richard III (C.P.R. 1476-1485, pp. 400, 489). Nevertheless, he was evidently accepted by the new government, for he was put on commissions in the early years of Henry VII (C.P.R. 1485-1494, pp. 133, 179). Some time before 1480 he married the widow of Sir Thomas Hungerford (C.P.R. 1476-1485, p. 171).

<sup>2</sup> Again Queen Margaret appears to have been more generous. The corresponding item in her account of 1452-3 allows her clerk of the receipt, William Nanseglos, to claim for 32 weeks in London, and he appears to have had his 53s. 4d. (ante, xl. 421).

<sup>1</sup> As the first Duke of Buckingham had been killed at the Battle of Northampton fighting for the Lancastrians, his lands had been confiscated by Edward IV and his sons had become wards of the Crown. Soon after Edward's recognition of Elizabeth Woodville as his wife, the design may have been formed to marry her sister Catherine to Henry Stafford, the heir to the dukedom of Buckingham, and to restore him to his title; for in the session of Parliament that opened in January 1465 we find him recognized as Duke (Rot. Parl. v. 450) and at the coronation of the queen in May 1465 he and his brother Humphrey were knighted. A contemporary account of the coronation speaks of "the young Duchess of Buckingham" as though the Duke of Buckingham were already married to Catherine Woodville, the queen's sister (G. Smith, The Coronation of Elizabeth Wydeville (1935), p. 16), though the Annales Rerum Anglicarum postpones this event until the christening of the Princess Elizabeth in February 1466. Certainly Queen Elizabeth had the two boys in her household as early as August 1465 (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 463) when she was allowed 500 marks yearly for their maintenance. Compared with this sum, the payment to Master John Giles does indeed seem small, as Miss Scofield observed (op. cit. i. 378). Yet it must be remembered that the profits accruing from service in a royal household seldom ended with the "reward" that was recorded in the accounts; and in this case it led to John Giles becoming tutor eventually to Prince Edward and Prince Richard, the sons of Edward IV, with, inter alia, a grant of £20 a year from the

Chester Herald was either Roger Stamford or Roger Bromley (ibid. p. 67); Thomas Whiting, who held the office in the latter part of the reign, and under Richard III and Henry VII, and wrote interesting accounts of the tournament between Lord Scales and the Bastard of Burgundy in 1467 and of the reinterment of Richard Duke of York in 1476, was only Nucelles Pursuivant at this time (Bentley, Excerpta Historica (1831), p. 175). The feast of the Circumcision (January 1st) and not Christmas Day was the great mid-winter date for the giving of presents (ante, xlvi. Et soluta Johanni Amadas,<sup>4</sup> civi et aurifabro Londonie, pro diversis jocalibus ad usum dicte regine emptis, per litteras ipsius regine de warranto, datas 28<sup>o</sup> die Decembris anno dicti regis nunc 6<sup>to</sup> super hunc compotum liberatas et remanentes ut supra, per quas eadem domina regina voluit et dicto generali receptori suo <sup>1</sup> Sir Robert Shotisbroke had served in France under Henry V and Henry VI (C.P.R. 1429-1436, p. 122; C.P.R. 1452-1461, p. 398), so that he was by this time a very old man. His pension was confirmed by Edward IV and exempted from resumption in 1464; this pension was to be paid from the income of the manors of Uplambourne and Chipping Lambourne which had been granted to the queen. Hence the old warrior had to receive his reserved pension from the queen's receiver-general (Rot. Parl. v. 527).

et Roberto Iseham, solicitario domine regine,<sup>4</sup> pro quadam summa £80 per eosdem ad requisitionem et beneplacitum suum deliberata per viam

<sup>2</sup> John Baker, yeoman of the king's privy larder, was, along with the yeoman of the king's common larder, granted in 1463 the office of water-bailiwick and supervision of nets, etc., on waters in the counties of Huntingdon and Cambridge. In 1465 he was granted the manor of Budfield in Gloucestershire (C.P.R. 1461-1467, pp. 282, 448), a grant that was exempted from resumption in 1467 (Rot. Parl. v. 595).

<sup>3</sup> John Pykenham must have been fairly young at this time; for in 1488 he was awarded a life annuity of £10 a year as apothecary to the queen of Henry VII (C.P.R. 1485-1494, p. 252). If this amount of £18 17s. 6d. should seem large, it has to be remembered that some drugs were very exotic and correspondingly expensive. In 1464 nearly £88 was spent on drugs for the king's use (F. Devon, Issues of the Exchequer (1837), p. 487).

prestiti, per litteras eiusdem domine regine de warranto datas ultimo die Novembris anno dicti regis nunc 7<sup>mo</sup> liberatas et remanentes ut supra, per quas prefata domina regina voluit et dicto generali receptori suo mandavit, quod de exitibus recepte sue, accrescentibus ad festum Sancti Michelis in clauso huius compoti, contentet et solvat prefatis Rogero, Johanni, et Roberto summam predictam, absque excusacione seu ulteriori dilatione et quod littere prediche sibi in hac parte forent sufficientem warrantum, videlicet in persolucionem eiusdem summe

Et soluta Johanni Apole, valecto stuffure curre regine,<sup>1</sup> pro diversis parcellis monete, per ipsum applicatis et solutis pro diversis stuffuris ad usum prefate regine et per mandatum suum, a 22<sup>do</sup> die Novembris anno dicti regis nunc quarto hucusque, per litteras dicte regine de warranto, datas primo die Julii anno eiusdem regis septimo, per acquietanciam suam simul cum warranto predicto ut supra remanentem

Et soluta magistro Willelmo Say, decano capelle dominorum regis et regine<sup>2</sup>, ut de denariis sibi debitibus pro cotidianis oblacionibus ipsius regine, inter ultimum diem Septembris anno dicti regis 4<sup>to</sup> et festum Sancti Michelis Archangeli in clauso huius compoti, scilicet pro tribus annis integris, per litteras regine de warranto, datas 12<sup>mo</sup> die Decembris anno eiusdem regis septimo inter warranta predicta remanentes

Adhuc soluciones per litteras de warranto

Et soluta reverendo in Christo patri ac domino cardinali Anglie<sup>3</sup> de parte £366 13s. 4d. sibi per eandem reginam assignatorum et solvendorum in forma sequenti, videlicet ad festum Natalis Domini proxime post clausum huius compoti, £100, ac ad festum Pasche tunc proxime sequentem, £100, necnon ad festum Sancti Michelis extunc proximum sequentem, £100, ac ad festum Pasche tunc proxime sequentem, £66 13s. 4d., per litteras suas de warranto, datas 21<sup>mo</sup> die Octobris anno septimo predicto super hunc compotum liberatas, per quas

<sup>2</sup> William Say, king's clerk, had been dean of St. Paul's since 1457. He died in 1468 and was succeeded by Dr. Roger Radcliff, Queen Elizabeth's Chancellor (Le Neve, op. cit. v. (St. Paul's, rev. Horn), p. 6). Cf. Myers, The Household of Edward IV (1959), pp. 34, 291. In 1461 the king had confirmed to him the grant for life of the hospital of St. Anthony in the City of London (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 11). He had been dean of the Chapel Royal since 1449 and was continued in that office by Edward IV. Queen Margaret gave him £7 11s. 0d. for offerings at the rate of 4d. for the period December 1451 to Easter 1483 (ante, xl. 422).

<sup>3</sup> The Cardinal of England was Thomas Bourgchier, Archbishop of Canterbury, who was created a cardinal in September 1467 (Myers, op. cit. p. 29; F. R. H. Du Boulay, Registrum Thome Bourgchier (C. and Y. Soc., 1957), pp. xxi).

eadem domina regina voluit et prefato generali receptori suo mandavit, quod de revacione recepte sue contentet et solvat prefato cardinali, seu eius in hac parte factori aut attornato, eadem summam £366 13s. 4d., modo et forma predictis, recipiens ab eodem ad quamlibet solutionem sufficientes litteras suas acquietancie, per quas et litteras de warranto predictas voluit, quod debitorum inde habeat allocationem in compotis suis inde reddendis, videlicet in persolucione dictarum £100 pro termino Natalis Domini Christi proximo post clausum huius compoti ac per acquietanciam suam simul cum warranto predicto ut supra remanentem £100

Et soluta Willelmo Kerver,<sup>1</sup> custodi magne garderobe regine, in persolucionem £33 2s. 0d. per eandem reginam sibi debitorum pro certis stuffuris per ipsum ad usum prefate regine preantea debitum, per litteras suas de warranto, datas 27<sup>mo</sup> die Novembri anno dicti regis nunc 6<sup>to</sup> inter warranta predicta remanentes, videlicet in allocacione summe predicte £33 2s. 0d. /

Allocacio superplusagii—Et in allocacione facta prefato receptori generali compoti de quodam superplusagio in compoto suo de anno proximo precedente habito, ut in pede eiusdem plenius apparent £457 0s. 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. /

p. 39

Et in denariis liberatis Willelmo Kerver, custodi magne garderobe dicte domine regine, super empacionibus, provisionibus et expensis factis in officio eiusdem, in partem solutionis maioris summe sibi per dictam dominam reginam assignatae, percipiende de arreragio diversorum officiariorum et ministrorum suorum, debito super determinacionem compotorum eorundem ad festum Sancti Michelis anno 6<sup>to</sup> regis nunc Edwardi 4<sup>ti</sup>, prout in quibusdam indenturis inde inter prefatam dominam reginam et ipsum Willelum, super hunc compotum ostensis et penes ipsum remanentibus, plenius apparent, ac per aliis indenturis, inter eundem Willelum et dictum receptorem generalem, solutionem inde testificantibus super hunc compotum liberatis et inter warranta predicta remanentibus, datis [blank] die [blank] anno eiusdem regis 7<sup>mo</sup> £209 13s. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.

Custos magne garderobe regine

Et in consimilibus denariis liberatis eidem Willelmo, super huiusmodi empacionibus, provisionibus et expensis factis in eodem officio infra supradictum tempus huius compoti, ad diversas vices, per manus Mauricij Kidwelly,<sup>3</sup> receptoris domine regine in partibus australibus Anglie, et sibi assignatis per eandem reginam de exitibus et revacione officii dicti receptoris huius anni, per indenturam inde superiorius in proxima particula precedente plenius annotatam, necnon indenturas supradictas ut supra liberatas et remanentes £907 7s. 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.

Liberaciones denariorum officiariis regine : Clericus avenarii regine

Et in consimilibus denariis liberatis Jaquetto Blundell, clero avenarii dicte domine regine,<sup>1</sup> super empacionibus et provisionibus feni, avenarii, necessariorum et cariagii ac solucionibus pro vadiis stabulariorum ac aliorum infra tempus huius compoti, per litteras ipsius regine de warranto, datas [blank] die [blank] anno [blank] regis nunc, per quas eadem regina voluit et dicto receptori suo generali mandavit, quod de revencione recepte sue deliberata faciat et solvat prefato Jaquetto, per indenturam inter ipsos de tempore in tempus fiendas et durante suo beneplacito tales summas monete quales per discretionem dicti receptoris generalis et aliorum de consilio prefato regine erunt necessarias et requisitas sibi habendas ad intencionem supradictum, ad diversos vices, videlicet, prima vice 5<sup>to</sup> die Augusti dicto anno 7<sup>mo</sup>, £30; secunda vice 21<sup>mo</sup> die Novembri eodem anno, £40; tercia vice 27<sup>mo</sup> die eiusdem mensis anno predicto, £30; 4<sup>ta</sup> vice 16<sup>mo</sup> die Februarii dicto anno, £108 6s. 8d., per 4<sup>or</sup> indenturas inde super hunc compotum liberatas et inter warranta supradicta remanentes—£208 6s. 8d.

Et in consimilibus denariorum solucionibus diversis creditoribus domine regine, in partem solucionis maioris summe eisdem ac aliis personis pro feno, avenarii, litera, cariagio, ferruris equorum, et alio tempore Johannis Bekwith,<sup>2</sup> nuper avenarii ipsius regine, super determinacionem separabilem compotorum suorum, prout per duos rotulos papiri inde factos ac diversas billas de debentura ac tallias per dictum avenirium et provisores siliconis factas et signo manuali suo signato, super hunc compotum restituto, plenius poterit apparere, necnon per litteras eiusdem regine de warranto, datas [blank] die [blank] anno [blank] dicti regis nunc simul cum billis predictis ut supra remanentes.

Et in consimilibus denariorum solucionibus huiusmodi creditoribus ac servientibus stabuli ipsius regine in persolucionem omnimodi denariorum eiusdem debitorum, pro vadiis suis ac aliis rebus emptis et expenditis in stabulo predicto ante primum diem Aprilis dicto anno 7<sup>mo</sup>, sicut continetur in dictos /

rotulos papiri inde factos quam in quodam quaterno papiri de particulis compoti dicti avenarii, finiente ultimo die Junii eodem anno, per litteras prefate regine de warranto, datas 7<sup>mo</sup> die Decembri anno 7<sup>mo</sup> supradicto, inter warranta predicta remanentes, per quas eadem regina voluit et dicto generali receptori suo mandavit, quod sine dilatione contentet et solvat omnibus et singulis officiariis stabuli sui omnia vadia et alia debita adtunc aretro existentes et non solutos et quod littere predicte in hac parte forent sufficiens warrantum.

<sup>2</sup> John Bekwith was described as "of the king's household" in 1462 (C.C.R. 1461-1468, p. 89). In 1463 a John Bekwith was scrutineer and surveyor of all wool shipped from the ports of Boston and Bishop's Lynn (C.P.R. 1461-1467, p. 303). He was later outlawed for debt but was pardoned in November 1465 (ibid. p. 420). If this is the same man as the avenir of Queen Elizabeth, he may have been dismissed as untrustworthy.

Et in denariis liberatis prefate regine in cameram suam ad diversas vices, videlicet, prima vice octavo die Aprilis eodem anno 7<sup>mo</sup>, £20; secunda vice 23<sup>o</sup> die Julii eodem anno, £120; tertio vice 27<sup>mo</sup> die Septembris eodem anno, £11; 4<sup>ta</sup> vice 21<sup>mo</sup> die Octobris dicto anno, £100; quinta vice 18<sup>o</sup> Novembris anno supradicto, £30; 6<sup>ta</sup> vice 15<sup>mo</sup> die eiusdem mensis anno predicto, £400; 7<sup>a</sup> vice 25<sup>o</sup> die eiusdem dicto anno, £169 14s. 3½d.; octava vice 28<sup>o</sup> die mensis predicte, £60 10s. 5¾d.; nona vice 4<sup>to</sup> die Decembris anno 6<sup>to</sup> regis predicti, 500 marcis; 10<sup>a</sup> vice secundo die Januarii anno 7<sup>mo</sup> predicto, £135 6s. 8d., per 10 acquietancias sub magno sigillo ipsius regine simul cum warrantis et acquietanciis predictis inter warranta predicta remanentes, et 11<sup>ma</sup> vice per manus Willelmi Wulflete, clerici nuper cancellarii universitatis Cantebrigensis<sup>1</sup>, £10, ut in precio unius libri eidem domine regine venditi.
